TONKOTSU BROTH

豚骨ラーメン

The soup broth for tonkotsu ramen is based upon pork bones, and "tonkotsu" (豚骨 in Japanese) means "pork bones". The soup broth is prepared by boiling pork bones in water for a significant amount of time, up to eighteen hours, and the broth is typically cloudy in appearance.

SHOYU BROTH

醤油ラーメン

Shoyu Ramen is also known as Tokyo ramen, the broth is characterized by a savory, salty, and slightly tangy flavor derived from the use of soy sauce as a primary flavoring element.

MISO BROTH

味噌ラーメン

Miso ramen soup is flavored with soybean paste (miso) and the final touch of extract of pork fat, resulting in a thick, brown soup with a rich, complex flavor. The style originated in Hokkaido where the long cold winters spurred the need for a heartier type of ramen soup.
